The following is a quotation of 35 U.S.C. 103(a) which forms the basis for all obviousness rejections set forth in this Office action:

(a) A patent may not be obtained though the invention is not identically disclosed or described as set forth in section 102 of this title, if the differences between the subject matter sought to be patented and the prior art are such that the subject matter as a whole would have been obvious at the time the invention was made to a person having ordinary skill in the art to which said subject matter pertains. Patentability shall not be negated by the manner in which the invention was made.

Claims 1-44 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 103(a) as being unpatentable over Lee et al in view of Tanimoto et al for the reasons set forth in rejecting the claims in the last Office action.

Lee et al disclose a preservative composition comprising magnesium, zinc, copper, and calcium for use in the production of food products (see entire patent, especially the Examples).

The claims differ as to the specific amounts claimed and the specific recitation of solid and aqueous.

Tanimoto et al disclose a mineral composition wherein the product may be in liquid, powder, or solid (see entire patent, especially claim 6).

In the absence of a showing to the contrary, the amounts claimed are merely seen to be a matter of choice and well-within the skill of the art, where too much or too little would not have the desired known effect. At most the amounts are seen to be no more than optimization, see In re Boesch 205 USPQ 215.

It would have been obvious to a person of ordinary skill in the art, at the time the invention was made, to produce the composition as either a liquid or a solid as taught by Tanimoto et al and to use the claimed amounts in that of Lee et al because the choice of liquid or solid is conventional in the art and the amounts chosen are no more than within the skill of the art.

Applicant's arguments filed October 3, 2003 have been fully considered but they are not persuasive.

Applicant argues that the prior art teaches the use of the claimed composition to preserve color and texture in the manufacture of pasta, not to cook pasta.

Lee et al teaches the use of the claimed composition in the preparation of pasta where it is not seen how this differs from that of the claimed invention. The selection of the time of addition is merely a matter of choice and well-within the skill of the art.

Applicant has not established criticality to the time of addition.

Applicant claims a composition that is not dependent on process limitations (claims 1-28, and 35-44). It is noted that the recitation that the product is made by a new process, if the process were indeed new and patentable, does not render an otherwise unpatentable product new and patentable. The product must stand on its own invention, independently of the process of producing same. See In re Marosi, 218 USPQ 195; In re Thorpe, 227 USPQ 964; Ex parte Jungfer, 18 USPQ 2d 1976.

Applicant argues that there is no motivation to combine the references.

In response to applicant's argument that there is no suggestion to combine the references, the examiner recognizes that obviousness can only be established by combining or modifying the teachings of the prior art to produce the claimed invention where there is some teaching, suggestion, or motivation to do so found either in the references themselves or in the knowledge generally available to one of ordinary skill in the art. See In re Fine, 837 F.2d 1071, 5 USPQ2d 1596 (Fed. Cir. 1988) and In re Jones, 958 F.2d 347, 21 USPQ2d 1941 (Fed. Cir. 1992). In this case, the prior art is both directed to the use of mineral compositions in food products.

Attention is once again invited to In re Levin, 84 USPQ 232 and the cases cited therein, which are considered in point in the fact situation of the instant case, and wherein the Court stated on page 234 as follows:

This court has taken the position that new recipes or formulas for cooking food which involve the addition or elimination of common ingredients, or for treating them in ways which differ from the former practice, do not amount to invention, merely because it is not disclosed that, in the constantly developing art of preparing food, no one else ever did the particular thing upon which the applicant asserts his right to a patent. In all such cases, there is nothing patentable unless the applicant by a proper showing further establishes a coaction or cooperative relationship between the selected ingredients which produces a new, unexpected, and useful function. In re Benjamin D. White, 17 C.C.P.A. (Patents) 956, 39 F.2d 974, 5 USPQ 267; In re Mason et al., 33 C.C.P.A. (Patents) 1144, 156 F.2d 189, 70 USPQ 221.

THIS ACTION IS MADE FINAL. Applicant is reminded of the extension of time policy as set forth in 37 CFR 1.136(a).

A shortened statutory period for reply to this final action is set to expire THREE MONTHS from the mailing date of this action. In the event a first reply is filed within TWO MONTHS of the mailing date of this final action and the advisory action is not mailed until after the end of the THREE-MONTH shortened statutory period, then the shortened statutory period will expire on the date the advisory action is mailed, and any extension fee pursuant to 37 CFR 1.136(a) will be calculated from the mailing date of the advisory action. In no event, however, will the statutory period for reply expire later than SIX MONTHS from the mailing date of this final action.
